"José Quiñones strives for a photorealism of the image, breaking away from the rectangular format by shaping the canvas... It is fascinating to examine his work up close, knowing it is done with a brush and not a spray gun."

Claudia Roberts Trevithick
Midwest Art Magazine 76

"I was captivated with objects so much that the surrounding areas in my paintings became unimportant. I omitted the background and let the gallery wall serve that purpose. I shape my canvases to fit the contour of the object involved. I transcend the two dimensional surface through the manipulation of color and value to create a three dimensional illusion of the image. The abstract quality of something so large when viewed up close, intrigues me also."
